Discovering the Heart of Jesus - Fount of Life

An encounter with Jesus results in an inevitable change. The change is internal, and the outside world doesn't experience it except in seeing in us the newness of a different way of life.

The change brought about by Jesus in the Samaritan woman was both private and public. When Jesus refers to her husband, he is not just alluding to her adultery but to idol worship.

The Samaritans, in fact, were hated by the Jews because they worshiped Baal, the fertility God of the pagans whose translation from Hebrew means 'husband'. In fact, idol-worship in the Old Testament was often likened to marital infidelity because the covenants made by God to His people were considered a form of marriage pact sealed forever in blood. Indeed, Samaritans were hated above all because they had once been Jews but infringed the covenants by intermarrying with pagan nations and had abandoned temple worship at Jerusalem to adopt their idolatrous practises based on fertility cults.

To add emphasis, the dialogue between Jesus and the Samaritan takes place at Jacob's Well which is where Jacob, father of the kingdom of Israel, met his wife Rachel. Jesus, therefore, when speaking to the Samaritan, is making a sort of marriage proposal. The dialogue between them only makes sense when seen in this light. Indeed, Jesus moves the conversation on from her personal morality, and her many husbands, to that of right worship.

Jesus alludes to her idolatry when speaking of Himself: 'He you have now is not your husband'. In other words, I am not just one of your Baal's (idols), but the Christ, the Son of the living God.

When Jesus talks to her about 'water' he's talking about the newness of the life in God that only He (Jesus) can give - only Jesus can forgive sin and restore us to the Father in a new form of life - God's own life communicated to us by grace.

Indeed, when the Samaritan quizzes him on the right way to worship, Jesus tells her that the time is coming when the Father will be worshiped neither in Jerusalem in the temple, nor as an idol (a sort of fertility symbol) but He rather seeks those who worship Him in Spirit and in Truth.

The Church presents us with the theme of living water this week to illustrate the nature of this true worship, that of the worship of the Father in Spirit and in truth. Jesus is the Way the Truth and Life, only through Him can right worship to the Father be given by those immersed in the waters of Baptism and endowed with the gift of the Holy Spirit - the permanent indwelling of God in the soul. They (you and me) are those now empowered to carry on the works of the gospel through the spirit of Jesus.

The water that gushed forth from the rock at Meribah in the first reading, and the living fountain springing up to eternal life spoken of by Jesus at Jacob's Well, find ultimate expression in the pierced heart of Jesus from which flowed blood and water from the cross

- it's there that the sacramental life of grace begins; first with Baptism, then reconciliation, and then, ultimately, communion with God in the Eucharist through the holy sacrifice of the Mass.

The challenge to us is to relive and engage in the newness of life which sprang forth in us at our Baptism. To re-engage with the Spirit of God by restoring His presence through confession, and to then seek ultimate union with the Father through Jesus in the Eucharist. This is where our Lent is leading - the pierced heart of Jesus still alive in the Eucharist.

Our biggest obstacle, like that of the Samaritan woman, are our idols. Jesus makes the same marriage proposal to us today. Once having left the hedonistic and self-indulgent idols the world has to offer, to which we become so dependent and absorbed, we are able to live a spiritual form of life in union with God Himself: through Jesus Christ in virtue of the outpouring of His spirit upon us from cross, given us in abundance through the sacraments of the Church.
